CONCRETE FAIR PLAN IS SLATED

Experts to Provide Plats For Consideration Here

CITY PLAN LINES

Provisions For Permanency And Expansion Included

Conference with expert planning engineers was held by Manager A. L. Burge of the fair association Saturday while attending the state fair at Dallas, with the idea of having local fair grounds laid out in a systematic manner on a basis of permanency and for expansion.

Need Room for Expansion

Burge said the fair's main problem now is more room for expansion and is of such importance no haphazard building of grounds and buildings should be followed. The manager declared he learned from state fair officials that that body 10 years ago had the city planner, Kessler lay off and plat the fair grounds there. These told Burge this had resulted already in saving the state fair a half million dollars.

Systematic Plan Needed

"Port Arthur's fair is for all time and should be planned systematically. Mistakes made now by not making proper allowance for future expansion will result in congestion and big losses years from now," Burge said. Blue prints and plats of the fair ground will be made by the experts and submitted to the directors sometime within the next few weeks, it is planned.

WILL TALK OVER GARMENT PLANT

Have Heads to Consider Added Capital

Question of a garment factory for Port Arthur for which $10,000 capital stock was recently raised to match a like amount promised by O. D. W. West, Little Rock manufacturer, will again be raised this afternoon when a meeting will be held at 2 o'clock at the Chamber of Commerce and Shipping by those most actively behind the movement.

Ed Lohmann, chairman of the drive which secured Port Arthur's capital quota, and H. F. Banker, executive chairman of the finance committee, are calling today's meet. Whether $15,000 more of stock should be raised to give Port Arthur stockholders controlling interest in the factory is one of the main questions to be decided, Lohmann said. Should this action be taken an even larger factory, to employ 500 instead of 200, will be built, those in a position to know, say.

Under the present status West will control 51 per cent of the stock. Local capitalists and many others subscribing stock feel the controlling interest should be here.

"We expect a good many big collections yet this month," said Lemax. "Three per cent discount is allowed before November 1, but during November the discount will be only two per cent."

City to Move Traffic Cones, 'Make Object Lessons' of Violators

Chief La Rose to Pass On Question of $225 Claim For Damage to McFaddin Car in Friday Wreck

Words flew back and forth in the city commission meeting this morning as the city commissioners, together with Fire Chief LaRose and Motorcycle Officer Davis held a "post-mortem" on the fire truck-auto collision Friday night.

As a result, the following was agreed: Chief LaRose will decide what, if anything, the city will pay W. D. McFaddin for the repair of his car in Friday night's wreck. McFaddin said repair of his car would cost $225. Repair of the fire truck has already cost the city $185.

Many Substitute Mounds

Traffic markers in the middle of street intersections will be removed. Concrete mounds six to eight inches high probably will be placed instead. Markers for the street car safety zones will remain.

The city will clamp down on violators of the fire traffic ordinance, and make object lessons of the first violators caught hereafter by assessing heavy fines.

Motorcycle Officer Davis will remain on duty at the fire station as much as possible, and will make many arrests of fire traffic violators as possible.

"It's only a matter of time until somebody will be killed," LaRose told the commission, and the other officials agreed with him.

Place Matter Before Dycus

Mayor Logan suggested to Davis that he pay a call on Judge Dycus and present the situation to him. "And we'll see if we can't crack down next time," Davis had complained that several arrested for failing to turn to the curb for fire trucks had been dismissed in corporation court.

"A good stiff fine, they'll stop it," Davis said.

"People here know better, but they think they can get away with it," Chief LaRose said.

"I warned nine the other day, and they stopped all right, but just laughed at me," said Davis.

Discuss Fire Officer

Davis said he would be able to remain on duty at the Central fire station.

30 MEN SOUGHT FOR AIR CORPS

Reserves Wanted to Organize Body Here

Quota of 30 men eligible to service in the U. S. army reserve officers flying corps is being sought by the Port Arthur Reserve Officers Association to insure the location of a flying unit training station here, officials in the association said today.

"A pay roll of nearly $5,000 a month would be added to Port Arthur, in addition to purchases of gasoline and oil supplies here that would amount to approximately 100,000 gallons annually," Elgin H. Blalock, assistant secretary of the reserve officers association, said.

6 Planes Furnished

Six planes would be furnished by the government in addition to a corps of commissioned and non-commissioned officers in the aviation corps for instructors in the reserve officers training stations, according to Blalock. Three hours flying service each week would be required of reserve officers signing up for training here.

Poster of the reserve officers in Jefferson county has been requested by Blalock, and from this men eligible for the air service will be selected and special efforts made to have them line up for the training station here.

Those interested are asked to communicate with Col. C. H. Fitz-Gerald, head of the reserve officers association, or through post office box 241, Blalock said.

STOKES GAINS GROUND

Pollock, for Whom Shot Was Sent, on Secret Errand

The bullet meant for the death of Deputy Sheriff Artie Pollock and that placed R. C. Stokes at death's door by mistake Friday night at Beaumont may have been bought in Port Arthur.

Two one-ounce lead balls, exactly like the ball in the shotgun shell that ripped open one of Stokes' lungs, were bought one day last week at the J. R. Adams and company store in Port Arthur, it was learned in Beaumont this morning.

This angle had been puzzling the officers ever since the near-murder Friday night, and messages had been rushed to various ammunition manufacturers to find out more about the missile after it was learned that the ball had not been sold in Beaumont.

Made Gaping Wound

The ball, about the diameter of a dime, is of the type used to kill big game and used by circusmen in emergency guns to halt animals running amuck. Whereas an ordinary rifle bullet makes a clean-cut wound, which, even if it pierces the lung, makes recovery fairly easy, the shotgun shell carrying the lead ball made a ragged, gaping wound which caused the blood to clot rapidly. Heavy clots of blood have formed over one of Stokes' lungs and have spread over the other lung as well.

The heavy clotting of blood over the wound in Stokes' lung makes any slight change in temperature or other bodily conditions highly dangerous because of the danger of pneumonia complications.

Say Stokes' Vitality Remarkable

At Hotel Dixie, where Stokes is making his gallant fight against death against almost insurmountable odds, physicians said they had never seen such a case in their lives, in which the patient was continuing to live when by all odds of medical science it was impossible for him to live.

"He's in a case by himself," physicians said. Stokes has not the slightest idea of death's proximity and is making his plans for what he will do after leaving the hospital. He regained consciousness Sunday, and was able to speak, rather feebly, but seemingly without particularly great effort.

No Enemies, Many Friends

Stokes' condition is rugged and a holding him up in his fight for life, physicians said. He remembers to the last detail his shooting, and (Turn to Page 2, Column 3.)

Mother Said She Killed Babe Because It Never Had a Chance

Cleveland Marital Tragedy Results in Murder Charge After Father Repudiates Parentage

CLEVELAND, Oct. 27.—"I did not believe my baby would have a fair chance in this world—because my husband refused to believe the child legitimate."

With this explanation Mrs. Blanche Tobias, 21, of Wooster, near here, admitted today to authorities there she strangled her two-weeks' old baby Sunday.

Prosecutor J. O. Fritz, of Wooster, today filed a first degree murder charge against the mother.

Admission to the killing came, according to Fritz, after Mrs. Tobias was confronted with a physician's certificate which indicated the child had been strangled to death.

"I pinched my baby's nose and pressed his throat. He died right away," Mrs. Tobias told Fritz. He said, "My child would never have had a fair chance in this world; he didn't look like his father."

The husband, George Tobias, denied parentage of the child.

Two months before the baby's birth, George and his father, Joseph Tobias, were charged with brutally beating the expectant mother. The charges were dropped when a reconciliation was apparently effected.

The child, a boy, was born in the Wayne county infirmary two weeks ago. The mother told Prosecutor Fritz she strangled the infant yesterday and then called a nurse.

"Look," she said, "my baby is dead."

A physician, after an examination, said death was caused by strangulation.

Mrs. Tobias was arrested on a charge of first degree murder. She was to be arraigned late today.

King of Finance Chess Board Here—and Nobody Knew It!

John F. Harris, 'Plain Folks' Multimillionaire and Former Partner of John W. Gates, Looks Us Over

He moves millions across the chess board of finance.

Friday he visited Port Arthur, but few here knew it.

His name is John F. Harris, multimillionaire who wears baggy clothes because he can afford to, and is plainspoken, democratic and treats everybody as equals because he can't afford not to.

Harris was a member of a party of Kansas City Southern officials who visited Port Arthur in the special car of President Edson, Friday, in a sort of semi-annual inspection of the Port Arthur route. The trip, according to officials themselves, was without significance, which may or may not be exactly the case in view of several pending issues before the Interstate Commerce commission affecting Port Arthur's right to a new (Turn to Page 2, Column 1.)

Cecil Rhodes Believed Not Seriously Hurt

TWO ACCIDENTS

Rhodes fell from a tank at the Texas Company's Port Neches plant this morning, receiving injuries which C. C. Hawkins, superintendent of the Texas Company at Port Neches, said were not believed to be serious.

Rhodes was brought to Mary Gates hospital in a Grammer ambulance.

The origin of the fire has not yet been determined.

KING OF FINANCE

line and throwing open of its dock facilities here to other lines.

Harris, a middle aged man, walks with a slow moving gait which is typically Harris when he walks. Financially speaking he is always on his feet, but actually there is no necessity for this, because it is his to command special trains, yachts, high priced automobiles and in fact everything poor folks think that a rich man should command but more often doesn't, which may be one reason why they are rich.

In former days, when that late king of high finance made Port Arthur his stamping ground and nursed it from a colicky babe to a tangible status which later put it in line to become a city of 41,000 and the nation's fifth port, Harris was a partner of John W. Gates. Now Gates is gone. But in Port Arthur there are many monuments to his activity here. Harris, who outlived him, who could put Gates' big fortune in his toothpick pockets and never knew he had it, looked upon these landmarks which linked Gates with Port Arthur's historic past and lived upon those days of his own association with the dead railroad magnate.

Gates, known far and wide as "Bet a Million" John Gates because that's what he did when he could find anybody to put in with him, is said to have been a source of considerable worry to the more equable and steady going Harris, who felt that some day he might have to bail Gates out of the poor house and donate him his meals. This never happened, which was one of the distinguishing characteristics of Gates, but friends of both declare that Harris lost sleep over it, skipped a few meals through worry over what he feared would be his friend's fate, and spoke many a chilling word to the bluff rail lord whom he regarded as a brother and loved with all his heart.

Gates was rough and ready, bluff spoken, physically active, loyal to his friends and acrimonious to his enemies. He is silent, but not morose; smiles when he feels like it which is often; believes in faith hope and charity and practice all three; can knock 'em cold in a director's meeting but in a crowd on the street might be taken for a man hurrying to his work in a factory.

Harris didn't get around much while in Port Arthur and outside of Wall Street few knew he was here. Besides a few millions which he carries around as pocket money Harris controls U. S. Realty, which he refinanced in a reorganization scheme when its stock had hit the bottom with a sickening thud, and through his expert manipulation it was run up above par and became a source of satisfaction to its owners. Also he is president of the Midland Securities company, another concern of millions. And also, among other things, he is a director of the K. C. S. and when he speaks, Chairman Loree of the board, who is noted for an unselfish and cold headed way of looking at things, bends an attentive ear, smiles the nearest approach to a smile he has been known to smile, and quite often has been known to find Harris' remarks feasible and altogether proper and fitting with the subject at hand.

This is the man who paid Port Arthur a visit. And Port Arthur didn't know it.

NEGROES OPEN REVIVAL HERE

Rev. C. S. DeLong of New Orleans to Preach

At the close of a festival week celebrating the third anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. J. H. Scypion, pastor of Mt. Zion negro Baptist church, a revival meeting will be opened in the church tonight by Rev. C. S. DeLong, of New Orleans, and services will be held during the next 10 days.

During the past week special services and prayer meetings have been held in Mt. Zion church, and Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock all negro churches in the city united at a service in Mt. Zion church to celebrate the third anniversary of Rev. Scypion as pastor here.

Special music was given at all the services during the past week, and Saturday night combined choirs of the negro churches gave a sacred concert.

CITY TO MOVE

tion most of the time to clear the way for the fire trucks, after Logan and LaRose had discussed the possibility of bringing another motorcycle officer for this purpose exclusively.

"The city would save money and save the life of some one by keeping an officer on duty at the fire station," said LaRose. "It's getting to be fierce. They follow us and sometimes one of our men has to step out of the way to keep from being run over when he makes a plug connection. It's only a matter of time till some one will be killed."

Upon LaRose's suggestion it was agreed that all markers in the centers of intersections would be removed in favor of small markers which could be straddled by drivers in case of an emergency.

"Take Corners On High Speeds." "Most of these traffic marker accidents are due to people turning corners at 50 miles an hour and then finding out they can't make it," Davis said.

"Well, they would run over them even if there was a house in the way," LaRose said.

W. D. McFaddin's visit to the meeting to secure the city to repair his car damaged in last week's collision with a fire truck started the discussion.

"It's as much the city's fault as mine," McFaddin said. "I didn't hear the fire alarm. I put on my brakes and turned with the truck—else I guess it would have killed me. I saw the chemical pass, but lots of times the chemical makes runs by itself."

LaRose to Decide Course

McFaddin estimated the damage could be repaired for $225. Mayor Logan brought out that any charge paid by the city would have to come out of the fire department's funds and referred the matter to LaRose for investigation. The fire chief said he would turn in a written report on the accident in a day or two, saying he was not in a position to make any decision now.

"It wouldn't have happened if that marker hadn't been in the middle, and made the fire boys turn a little to the right. Of course, I just turned to the right, too, and they sideswiped me," McFaddin said.

AUSTIN, Oct. 27.—Gross receipts tax amounting to $192,000 were paid into the state treasury Monday by the Humble Oil company and the Gulf Production company, the former paying $122,000 and the latter $70,000. These taxes cover the last quarter.

NURSERY NEEDS QUILTS, SHEETS

Birthday Party for Kiddies Is Postponed

The kiddies at the Day Nursery are badly in need of quilts, blankets and sheets.

This fact was made known today when Mrs. K. A. Young, chairman of the Day Nursery board, announced that the Day Nursery birthday party had been postponed because of an epidemic of measles at the home. The birthday party was being arranged for the purpose of getting for the home those things which are now needed. Port Arthur citizens and organizations all co-operating with the Day Nursery board donating generously for the home.

The custom is not to be discontinued, Mrs. Young declared today, and also stated that though the party was postponed indefinitely those persons having gifts to make to the kiddies may still make them.

If anyone having quilts, blankets, sheets, or any sort of a donation for the Day Nursery will call Mrs. A. S. Bailey, telephone 607, or Mrs. T. B. Sappington, telephone 2281-J arrangements will be made for calling for these articles.

is certain that the bullet was meant for Deputy Sheriff Artie Pollock, who shortly before left his home, where a party of five or six, including County Judge and Mrs. B. R. Johnson, were listening in at a radio party. Stokes said he had no enemies, and could imagine no other reason except that he was mistaken by the assassin for Pollock, a notorious nemesis of bootleggers.

Attendees at Hotel Dieu said they had never seen a man with so many friends. Flowers and words of sympathy have been coming in steadily at the hospital for the wounded man.

Not Called Out by Phone Call

Pollock was not called out of his home by telephone call Friday night, it developed today. He had an assignment at that time which called him out, Sheriff Tom Garner said. It is considered very likely that Pollock may have been on the trail of his would-be killer at the very time the guest in his home was shot. The sheriff declined to say what the nature of Pollock's business was Friday night, except that not the slightest shadow of apprehension could be cast over it. Pollock now is on a secret mission believed identified with the case.

Hours and hours of grilling given three men held in the shooting of R. C. Stokes at Beaumont today had failed to develop sufficient evidence to warrant filing of charges. The severe cross questioning was being done by Chief of Police Reid Tevis, Sheriff Tom Garner and a special investigator whose identity is being kept secret. All three of the men being quizzed have been convicted in Beaumont courts on various charges, one of them for murder.

The alibis offered by some of the men held do not check up exactly with their actions Friday night, it is understood, and the trio of investigators is trying to force out positive evidence one way or the other.

E. E. Plumley, superintendent of the Magnolia refinery at Beaumont, where Stokes was an employee, was today considering employment of another special investigator to delve into the depths of the shooting. Plumley was also considering posting of a reward for the discovery of the assassin.

SEVERAL WELLS DUG FOR STOCK

Drought Causes Death Of Water Supply

Special to The News.

BEAUMONT, Texas, Oct. 27.—Several wells were drilled during the past week between LaBelle and east of Big Hill to provide cattle in that vicinity with drinking water. Cattlemen reported that on account of the long drought, cattle went far in the marshes and as a result many were bogged down so deep that they could not be pulled out and it is estimated that probably 100 or more have died in the marshes already.

A survey was made below LaBelle on Saturday by County Surveyor George White, who declared that he was able to walk out farther in the marshes on dry land than in any other time in the past 16 years. He stated that the marsh country for within 10 miles of the gulf was covered with a crust that would hold up a man and that in his opinion survivors had gone into country the past week where no one had ever been able to go before.

2 ITALIAN SAILORS REFUSED LEAVE ABSENCE

Two Italian sailors on the Italian steamship Valrossa, which sailed out of Orange today, were refused permission to quit the ship at Orange and remain in the United States, following application made to immigration officials, E. R. Dilworth, immigration inspector in charge of the Sabine district, said today.

The sailors told immigration officials they were Agnostino Stinco and Salvatore Liberto. Rather than take chances with the men escaping from the ship, the captain had them kept in the Orange jail, and has wired ahead for police at Gulfport, Miss., to meet the Valrossa at that port and keep the men until the vessel sails for Buenos Aires, via Mobile, Dilworth said.

ANY WOMAN, any man, can now have a well-developed face and form. The whole, simple secret of a well-developed form is in the number of blood-cells in your body. You can now forget all the theoretical talk about diet, exercise, fat treatments, food-fats and fat-foods. Nothing is of any use, after all, except blood-cells! Thin, run-down men and women, with bony necks, sunken cheeks, bony shoulders—all these are suffering from one thing—too few blood-cells. Science has proved that S.S.S. helps to make the rich red-blood-cells, which you need. Your blood is starving for these new blood-cells! Give your blood the blood-cells it needs—take S.S.S., the great scientific blood-cell maker. S.S.S. has done marvels, too, in making beautiful complexion, clearing the skin, making lips rosy red, the cheeks full and plump—because it rids the blood of impurities which cause pimples, blackheads, acne, blotches, eczema, tetter, rash and rheumatism, too. As the medicinal ingredients of S.S.S. are purely vegetable, it may be taken with perfect safety. This is why S.S.S., since 1826, has meant to thousands of underweight men and women a plus in their strength. Abshire, Broussard Tie at 71 In News Cup Tourney

44 TURN OUT IN OPENER FOR SILVER TROPHY

Abshire Promises To Be Dark Horse

LEONARD ABISHIRE and W. W. Broussard are the first to have their names placed on the Port Arthur News cup, to be competed for in three tournaments. Abshire was the surprise of the first cup tournament yesterday over the Country club links, showing his colors as a dark horse. Abshire and Broussard were tied with a net total of 71.

Abshire was just right yesterday, shooting a 47 the first time and coming back with a 43 the second time. A total of 90 strokes, minus a handicap of 19, placed him into a tie with Broussard. The followers out at the club yesterday said Abshire probably had not been out three times all summer, but he had his sledge hammer stroke working off.

Much Interest Shown
Broussard made 57 strokes, 42 the first time and 41 the second time. His handicap of 16 made him a net total of 71. The most agreeably surprising feature of the tournament yesterday was the number competing, 44, several dropping out at the midway point. The tournament two weeks ago aroused the club and the golfers were in full force yesterday. A cup tournament will be held every two months, three victories to entitle permanent possession of The News cup, the trophy to remain at the clubhouse in the meantime. The cup is expected to arrive this week, and will be on display in the G. W. Inhof window.

C. L. Wignall, one of the best players at the club, was a trifle off yesterday, making it in 86 strokes, 41 the first time and 45 the second, minus a handicap of 19.

Henry Mills was playing a little better than usual, winding up with 90 for a net total of 76. He made it in 45 holes. Doc Pindexter played a sensational comeback for a net total of 76, making 83 strokes to get a handicap of seven. Pindexter made it over the course the first time in 45, and came back like a streak of lightning in 39. "Pretty good," Pindexter said. "Para only 56."

BUTTE G. O. P. PAWN. BLANTON CHARGES

BROWNWOOD, Oct. 27.—Thomas L. Blanton, member of congress from this district, delivered an address to several hundred people here tonight in course of which he charged that Dr. Butte voted for Peedy two years ago and that Butte is now the mere pawn of the republican leaders in Washington, who will use him as they see fit. He declared the only issue in this state today is republicanism against democracy, or honest government against dishonest government.

Master Zupke Meets Pupil Ingwersen When Hawkeyes Meet Illini Saturday

By BILLY EVANS

When Illinois meets Iowa it will be a battle of wits between the "Old Master," Bob Zupke, and one of his apt pupils, Bert Ingwersen.

These two great teams clash Nov. 1 at Urbana, Ill. It should be a contest well worth while.

Ingwersen, a star at Illinois, then assistant coach to Zupke, is making his debut as a "Big Ten" member. He is eager and anxious for victory, even though it is at the expense of his alma mater.

Illinois, joint holder of the 1923 championship, with a decisive victory over Michigan, who shared the honor with Zupke's team last year, is all set for another "Big Ten" title.

After starting at Illinois as a player, Ingwersen decided to take a "whirl" at the coaching game. Zupke, realizing his worth, placed him as one of his assistants after he closed his college career.

So far he has never had cause to regret it, as Ingwersen, as coach of the freshman team, shared the honors of a number of players who have since starred for Zupke.

Illinois, perhaps, scores a victory over Illinois, it is possible that Zupke might have a few regrets. However, in defeat Zupke has won

If Iowa, perchance, scores a victory over Illinois, it is possible that Zupke might have a few regrets. However, in defeat Zupke has won as well as in victory, and if he has to lose it could be to no better individual than Bert Ingwersen.

For three years as coach of the freshman team at Illinois, Ingwersen started on the path to fame such players as Grange, Britton, McIlwain, Rokusek and many others.

If there is one person outside of Zupke who knows the possibilities of "Red" Grange, it is Bert Ingwersen of Iowa.

If it is possible to stop Grange, rest assured that Iowa will come as close as any team in the west to turning the trick.

Ingwersen, by the way, is the only Illinois athlete to win three varsity letters in sport. His coaching efforts so far have been in keeping with his great success as a player.

Unquestionably the Iowa game is giving Coach Bob Zupke considerable worry. If Iowa is as strong as the experts rate it, Zupke will be forced to uncover much of his stuff, prove his resourcefulness if he is to win.

Ingwersen knows the Illinois system as taught by Zupke, and it is a certainty that Iowa is going to be well coached as to how to stop the Zupke offensive as led by Grange.

Split Formation With Nine In Line New Baylor Play

'Beat A. & M.' Cry of Bears With Texas and S. M. U. To Come

WACO, Texas, Oct. 27.—Forgetting the stigma of defeat suffered at the hands of the Austin College Kangaroos, the Baylor Bears plunged into intensive training for their premier Texas classic of the season against Texas A. & M. at the Cotton Palace

Nov. 8. Baylor's new open formation, which is introduced against Arkansas with such good effect again played its part in the Kangaroo game, being responsible for the Bears' most consistent gains in that game.

This new formation has been examined minutely by the scouts of other teams and those experts with their coaches are now laboring to figure a way to cope with this new puzzle displayed by Baylor.

Divides Defensive

This formation plays two men in the backfield with five men in the line centered around the ball. Two men play on each end of the line far over, leaving a wide gap between end and tackle. This spread serves a twofold purpose in that it divides the defensive team into a broken field which prevents the team from co-ordinating and it also leaves wide holes through which the runner is nearly assured of a few yards gain before a tackler can reach him.

This new formation will likely be one of the attacks used by the Bruins against Bible's squad and it will be interesting to note how the famous Aggie defense stacks up against this formation.

After witnessing the Aggies in their thrilling battle with S. M. U. Mustangs, Coach Bridges regards them as a very formidable team with their usual powerful defense and a wonderful offense. Bridges will be forced to uncover several of his tricks against the Aggies for the entertainment of Texas and S. M. U. scouts in the stands.

'Beat A. & M.' Baylor Motto

The Bruins are training with one thing blaring through in their minds and that is "Beat A. & M." That slogan was the original of southwestern football watchwords, being originated by Bridges, and it is such a slogan that is being instilled into the Bruins every minute of the day.

To defeat the Texas Aggies is their one desire and they will enter that game primed for the battle but at the same time they will have to remain at that high pitch for the next two battles against Texas and S. M. U.

The Baylor lineup will again be changed for the Texas-Aggie game. There are several injuries among the players, but Coach Bridges does not make his injuries public during playing season. These injuries perhaps may not cause any damage to the squad and again they may.

Jack Sisco was carried from the game injured last Saturday and fans who have witnessed this young giant in action during his last five years of playing in high school and university know that it must be a serious injury to take Sisco out of the game.

Sisco is a tough youngster, however, and he is likely to be back in the game against the Aggies as wild and dangerous as ever. Sam Coates will probably recover from the injury suffered in the Arkansas game enough to get back in against the Aggies which will make the Baylor lineup practically the same that played against Arkansas.

2,000 Cadeis Coming

Bridges, however, is known as the most mystifying coach in the conference and while the staff and calculating Bible is building his attack for one lineup, the Baylor mentor may suddenly decide on an entirely new combination.

With both Baylor and A. & M.

BUTLER OPENS FINAL DRIVE

Expresses Confidence Of G.O.P. Victory

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—William M. Butler, chairman of the republican national committee, opened the final week of the political campaign at republican headquarters here today with a statement expressing confidence in the success of the Coolidge-Dawes ticket at the election November 4.

Farmers and working men, Butler asserted, will support the republican ticket so that "the economic condition—now so rapidly improving—will not be disturbed."

"Forces are at work to disrupt everything," Butler declared.

"The socialist-third party nominee for president has made his appeal to voters of the Mississippi valley. He has asked them to throw into discord the constitution, the very protector of the welfare of the people. He has advocated government ownership of railroads and other dangerous doctrines. Now he has gone east, once more to plead these theories to industrial workers."

"We do not believe for one moment that the American people will be fooled. We are more confident than ever that they will elect Calvin Coolidge president eight days hence. We do not think they will countenance throwing this election into congress."

Declaring that President Coolidge "more than any other man in the world" has contributed to establishing prosperity, Butler closed his statement, as follows:

"In stating that we think Mr. Coolidge will be overwhelmingly elected on November 4, we base our belief on this desire of the citizens of America to continue in the ways of peace and prosperity."

Sharp Note Sent Persian Government

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—The state department today dispatched a sharp note of protest to the Persian government over its failure to carry out the death sentence of Seyid Euse, convicted ring leader of the fanatic mob which murdered American Vice Consul Robert W. Imbrie at Teheran last May, it is learned in well informed circles.

Action by the department follows the personal report of American Minister Joseph S. Kornfeld, who arrived here from Persia two days ago.

IOWA LOSES LINEMAN

LOWA CITY, Oct. 27.—Minnie's best lineman, Fleckenstein, Coach Ingwersen started today to round out a team capable of stopping Illinois and the great "Red" Grange.

TOLLEY SHOCKS 'EM

In a recent match in Atlanta against Bobby Jones, Cyril Tolley, noted British amateur, shocked the experts by receding off drives of prodigious length. On three different holes he drove the ball farther than any player had ever driven one before.

POLE SMUGGLED INTO U. S. DIES

Companion Held in Houston Too Weak to Talk

HOUSTON, Oct. 27.—Death and a prison cell were the rewards of Lawticky Matweichnik, 27, and a companion, both Poles, after braving terrific hardships and starvation in an attempt to smuggle themselves into the United States.

Captured by border immigration officers after both had collapsed in the sand among the clumps of mesquite brush on the prairie near here after leading a posse of officers a long chase, they were taken to jail.

Matweichnik was given food. He bolted it ravenously and he died in jail. His companion is yet too weak to tell the story of how they made their way from Poland.

AL SMITH JOINS DAVIS FORCES ON N. Y. STUMP

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Al Smith has taken off his hat, coat and vest "just as he had promised to the democratic convention last June, and joined hands with John W. Davis for an intensive final drive upon New York.

The democratic gubernatorial candidate and the presidential nominee opened the dual campaign with speeches to an assemblage of democratic women at a hotel meeting here.

ILLINOIS HOLDS BIG TEN FAVOR

Iowa to Try Grange Next Saturday

By HENRY L. FARRELL

United Press Staff Correspondent
COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 27.—Illinois still remains the outstanding favorite for the championship in the western conference race. Illinois did not engage in a conference game Saturday, but in defeating DePaul 45 to 0 the team showed the same punch and smoothness in the offense that it did in running wildly over Michigan.

Perhaps it looked even better because it showed that Illinois was not a Grange team entirely.

Iowa, Ohio State and Chicago remain technically in the ch. pionship race and if one of them is able to stop Grange it may be the team that will win the title.

Ohio Goal Line Crossed

Ohio State and Chicago, in engaging in a 3-3 tie here Saturday showed great defensive strength and it was quite obvious from the defensive power shown that Red Grange will not have the Roman badge he had against Michigan.

Ohio State has not had its goal line crossed this season, but this may not mean much toward a championship because Ohio State hasn't done much more scoring than has been done against it. Chicago showed much more of an offensive punch in line-plugging than Ohio.

Iowa seems to be improving with a 13 to 0 victory over Minnesota which had been looked upon as one of the dark horses of the conference.

Iowa didn't have enough punch to score against Ohio State but it is doubtful that Iowa will face such resistance against any other team in the conference.

Michigan's one luck with a 21 to 0 victory over Wisconsin in a most important game was one of the features of Saturday's games.

Wolverines Not Yet Out

After Illinois had given Michigan its first taste of defeat in three years, and a humiliating beating with it, some critics thought that the team would go to pieces.

Opinion was divided on this, however. "That defeat," A. A. Stagg, Chicago, coach said last week, "should be a factor in bringing the Michigan team around to its real form."

Under certain conditions, if like to see a team of mine lose a game because with the right kind of boys it makes them all the better in the next game."

Michigan is not out of the conference race definitely. If Illinois should happen to lose a game, the leaders will all be jammed in a bunch and it might be possible for Michigan to go back into a tie.

Illinois will have to defeat Chicago and Ohio State to keep its place clean and that would put Michigan in a tie with the runners-up. Michigan also plays Ohio State later and after seeing these two teams in action, it looks very much like Michigan will win.

Notre Dame meets Wisconsin in two weeks and the prestige of the western conference will be at stake. It may be true that Wisconsin is not the best team in the conference and cannot be looked upon as a conference standard bearer but in the words of Knute Rockne, the Notre Dame coach, "Wisconsin was the only good one I could get in the conference."

Zupke Prepares For Tough Iowa Contest

URBANA, Oct. 27.—Coach Zupke came home today with reports that the Iowa team intended to fire his Illini with fight. "They're big and tough," he said. He intends to devote some time to devising a defense for Parkin.

Fans are taking interest in the announcement that Firpo and Fred Fulton have been matched for a bout in Madison Square Garden. The see in it merely an attempt to "build up" Firpo for another big money match.

WHISTLE CUTS LOCALS OUT OF SEVEN POINTS

Galveston Line Averages Over 200 Pounds

These Port Arthur Pirates tamed the famed Galveston Hurricanes considerably yesterday in a 6 to 6 game. The Pirates were rated to be beaten by the Galveston team, but only once did the Hurricanes seriously threaten to put across a touchdown. In the first quarter Galveston came dangerously close to Port Arthur's goal line.

Ainsworth of the Hurricanes recovered Donaldson's fumble near mid-field and tipped on down the field placing the ball on the Pirate ten-yard line. A line buck netted five yards, but off-side cost the Hurricanes five yards. Grady Stewart pounced on Norton for another three-yard loss.

In desperation, Galveston tried a pass on third down but it failed. It was the only pass of the game for Galveston. This ended the quarter, and at the opening of the second quarter Norton, Galveston fullback attempted a placekick. This failed, thus missing the golden opportunity of the game to score.

Fight All the Way

Both sides were trying for that three-point margin of a field goal, but two attempts for each team were all misses. LeBlanc's try for a drop kick in the last period was blocked, but Donaldson fell on the ball for the Pirates.

The Pirates were outweighed by the Hurricanes, the Galveston line living up to its advertised weight of far more than 200 pounds on the average. It was a fight from start to finish, and the boys didn't hesitate to mix things for the fans. The crowd was gratifying to the Pirate manager, who made a slight cut on the gate admission to draw the fans in larger numbers.

It was the Pirates' battle for the most part, the locals carrying the game to the enemy, and only the whistle at the close of the game saved the Hurricanes' goal line. The Pirates had rammed the ball to the Galveston four-yard line, with two downs to go, when the whistle ended the game.

Norton's Punt Save
There was nothing slow about Sunday's game as compared with the 1923 game against the First Ward clubs of Houston. The Pirates made ten first downs to two for Galveston, but the game was much tighter than this would indicate. Norton, who was doing the punting for the islanders, always saved their hides by safely driving the ball out of danger.

Donaldson and Dupree played good games in the Pirate backfield, while Norton's work at center drew applause from the sidelines. Pittman and King were good at tackles, but both teams played good ball, line-bucking down the field one time and the ball coming right back again. Fumbles were present but none of them were crucial.

The two teams should meet again to decide the superiority.

Golf AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT

When and how, in playing a stymie should a putter be used? Under what circumstances should other clubs be used for the stymie shot? Describe the correct methods for playing the stymie.

Answered by
A. H. MURRAY
Canadian professional champion.

The correct club to use for stymie playing is a mashie-niblick or niblick not too heavy. This is for close-up stymies. An ordinary mashie should be used when both balls are not over six feet from the hole and within fifteen inches of each other.

When a mashie-niblick or niblick is being used the club should be held firmly in the fingers of both hands. Do not take too long a swing. Short, sharp strokes get the best results.

A putter should never be used for stymie play except when the slope of the green allows for "borrow."

Dr. Frank Crane's Editorials

THE BEST AMUSEMENT

The best form of amusement is not found by going forward in complexity and invention, but by going backward to simplicity.

The nearer a thing comes to being primitive, and the farther an act reaches back into antiquity, the more diverting it is apt to be.

People like baseball because, many thousand years ago, their ancestors ran from their enemies, or awaited them with branches broken from trees, or threw stones at them. This running, striking and throwing is what constitutes the game of baseball and these three acts reach back to such a time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary.

May Peterson, former Metropolitan Opera singer, was married last June to a wealthy Texas colonel, who was also a member of the American Legion. At the recent Convention held in St. Paul, May headed the Texas delegation as she rode upon an old grey mare.

She declared that it was her intention to ride to Texas on the "war."

"The Pioneer brides of Texas took their honeymoons in prairie schooners," she said, "I will go them one better. I never rode before, but I am game."

We predict that the charming May will find more fun in this trip than she has ever found in Broadway cafes or Paris entertainments.

She will be going back to Nature and will discover a thousand little pleasures in doing so that the members of the high life of society have forgotten. Many a bored member of the smart set would be rejuvenated if he could mount an old grey mare and ride out of his environment back to nature.

We cannot run away from the human race or escape our instincts. We cannot be wholly artificial even if we want to. Nature draws us back. And in the arms of Nature are usually found more kinds of genuine pleasure than are found anywhere else.

If there is any room on the back of Miss Peterson's old grey mare we would like to apply for the place. (Copyright, 1924, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

The Letter Box

DALRYMPLE'S SPEECH

That was an awful drubbing I received Saturday night by Major A. V. Dalrymple of Fort Worth. But I am still in the ring, right side up.

When I read, in the Sunday morning News, what he had said about me, I was reminded of an experience I had when I was a small boy. I owned two small pups and had much fun with them chasing rabbits, and one day they were chasing a rabbit round and around when it ran under an old feed trough that had been turned upside down, and I turned it over so they could get at the rabbit, but there were under it a trough a bunch of skunks and the pups knew no better than to pitch into them, with the result of having my clothes so saturated that I had to discard them and my mother made me keep the pups at the barn for a month.

I have been through many fights over religious questions during my 42 years' ministry, but this is the first time I have had a tilt with "good singing politicians."

During this campaign I had not attended a political meeting or made a political speech, did not know how, but few of my people were going to vote and did not vote, myself, in either of the primaries and then to have J. E. Rose, James A. Harrison and Steve King, within a few blocks of my church sling their filthy overalls at the preachers and churches in Jefferson county was more than I was willing to stand for.

A bigger lie never was invented by the father of lies than the statement made in that meeting that the churches had been turned into political machines. With perhaps one exception none of the churches have anything to do with politics and do not deserve the ridicule and abuse hurled at them by the "good singing politicians," but this is the spirit of the inquisition, that suppressed free speech and religious liberty during the dark ages. Why do they want to close the mouths of the preachers and keep the churches from having anything to do with politics if they are advocating a righteous cause?

The people of Texas know the color of the politicians that have been trying to keep the churches pure from politics, advising them to "scourge the political preachers back and stop their rations." When preachers and churches turn over the politics of our country to the political tricksters and grafters, the devil will have his way. The preacher is God's watchman on the wall of human society and the churches are the organized forces of righteousness. And Christians are "the salt of the earth" that saves this world from moral putrefaction.

All that is the matter with the Ferguson crowd is they are scared to death of the preachers and the Klan. If the Klan is dead, as they say, why do they not let it rest in peace? Next Friday night Port Arthur will have its streets deluged with political filth, but say that it is to be hoped that they can be cleaned up and fumigated and we can breathe with more ease for a time.

TOM CONNALLY OF TEXAS DENOUNCES STRAW VOTE

Tom Connally of Texas has denounced the straw vote being taken by the Literary Digest on the presidential nominees as bunk. "When such a vote is honestly conducted and honestly tabulated it is as much of a gamble as betting on the flip of a coin," remarked Tom Connally of Texas. "When dishonestly conducted or manipulated it partakes of the nature of a shell-game at a county fair. Some recent notable national polls have turned out as correct as Mother Shippen's prophecy of the end of the world."

Andrew W. Mellon, it will be recalled, evolved a taxation plan. This plan had the backing of Wall street, the backing of big business, the backing of President Coolidge but it was defeated by a combination of democrats and progressive republicans. Speaking of straw votes, Tom Connally of Texas again remarks:

"Take for instance the Literary Digest's straw vote on the Mellon plan. That poll cost a great deal of money and accounted for more than two million votes. It was denounced on the floor of the house as part of big business propaganda to stampede congress into passing the Mellon tax bill. This Literary Digest poll indicated the country was more than two to one in favor of the Mellon plan, whereas, it is now plain that the country is overwhelmingly against it and so great is the fear that the plan will be put forth again should the republicans remain in office, that it has become a live campaign issue."

Tom Connally of Texas should go back to the files of the Literary Digest of 1912. In that year Theodore Roosevelt split the republican party wide open and his bolt made possible the election of Woodrow Wilson. William Howard Taft was the republican nominee running for re-election. In that year the Literary Digest was taking straw votes and printing forecasts. This from the Digest of October 5, 1912, is very interesting:

"Mr. Taft's managers are pointing to the record crop and other earnest of growing popularity and declaring that the country will not risk a change when everything is going so well with it. Prosperity, admits the New York Evening Post, has always fought on the side of the party in power and the republican papers while not actually predicting victory, speak hopefully of the improved outlook. Thus the Boston Advertiser, republican, believes that Mr. Taft's prospects are already brightening its influence. The great majority of the business men in the middle west are coming over to the support of the republican ticket, reports the St. Louis Globe Democrat, republican. The country is prosperous and there is no reason for a change, declares the Baltimore American, republican."

Well, the election took place in November. Mr. Taft's republican party carried two states, Utah and Vermont and the democratic party went into power under Woodrow Wilson. Wilson got 435 electoral votes, Roosevelt 88 and Taft 8.

National Committeeman Hillis of New York managed the Taft campaign. The day before election he claimed 299 votes in the electoral college or twenty-four more than necessary to elect. All this reminds a Kansas democrat that Taft had his Ballinger, Harding had his Fall and Coolidge has his Denby and Daugherty who turned the oil reserves over to Doheny and Sinclair.

Likewise, William Howard Taft, now chief justice of the supreme court had his Theodore Roosevelt and Calvin Coolidge has his Robert M. La Follette. Tom Connally of Texas is reminded that the publisher of the Literary Digest is a wise man and casts an anchor to the windward. A late number of the Digest made this announcement:

"The Digest's famous straw votes represent the opinion of the so-called 'higher classes' of the population and do not reach down to the mudsills of society—the manual worker, the clerical workers and the agricultural workers."

And the higher classes are said to represent about twenty per cent of the voters of America so they alone are included in the presidential straw vote.

Almost one-half of the population of the United States live in what is known as the country. Only a very small percentage of this number, "the higher class ones," break into the voting contest of the Digest.

There are millions and millions of wage earners, both men and women, who are qualified voters. They are of and for the mudsills of society and voiceless in the straw vote taken by the famous New York publication.

Tom Connally of Texas represents a district which has a voting population of 98 per cent mudsill and two per cent higher class. Most of the Texas districts are mudsill districts.

Most of the congressional districts in all the forty-eight states are mudsill districts. They do not live in the higher class world, hence it is impossible for them to break into the Literary Digest referendum of and for the higher classes.

There are tricks in all trades and the straw vote is one of the tricks of political publishers who wish to make medicine or propaganda for favorite candidates or measures without openly showing their hands.

I'm a haunting apparition,
I'm the graveyard of ambition,
I'm the ultimate consumer of fiction
Manufactured by young writers
And misguided by older blighters
Who possess a literary predilection.

I accept, nor do I care to, to

One and all I take them in and don't Inspect 'em.

Though their plots are insipid,
Though they lack for punctuation,
Even if they can't be read, I never Reject 'em.

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments

FACTS VERSUS THEORY IN "THE IRON LAW OF WAGES"

When wages go up, the family goes down.

The "Iron Law of Wages" theory has fallacies.

The "Iron Law of Wages" theory is an old one which arose in France during the eighteenth century. This theory stated that "wages constantly tend to fall to the amount just necessary to maintain the laborer and bring up a new generation." This theory is based on the cost of production.

The theory was thought to work out because it was held that any increase in real wages would be followed by an increase in population and this increase in population would immediately make for cheaper labor. If, on the other hand, the wages fell below the point necessary for subsistence, it was held that the laborer would starve—or his children would—and consequently produce a shortage of labor which would send wages up to the standard again.

One of the chief fallacies with the theory lies in the fact that statistics now show that when wages become higher the size of families grows less. This is particularly true in America. (Copyright, 1924, Associated Editors, Inc.)

The Affair at Flower Acres
© 1924 by MIA Service Inc. WELLS

BEGIN HERE TODAY

The body of Douglas Raynor is found in the early evening on the floor of the sun room at Flower Acres, his Long Island home. Raynor has been shot through the heart, standing over the dead man pistol in hand is Malcolm Finley, former sweetheart of Raynor's wife, Nancy. Finley, Raynor's nurse, stands by the door with her hand still on the light switch. In a moment Nancy appears, white-faced and terrified. Orville Kent, Nancy's brother, comes in from the south side of the room, and then Ezra Goddard, friend of Finley, with others, enter upon the scene. Police, headed by Detective Dobbins, are conducting an investigation. I found Mr. Raynor on the floor, a pistol by his side," Finley explains. "I picked up the weapon. Suddenly the whole thing came back. Miss Turner stood in the house doorway."

Now go on with the story CHAPTER V Family Affairs

Mr. Dobbins raised his finger. "Wait, sir, stop right there. Let me reconstruct the scene."

He rolled off this phrase with gusto.

"As I understand it, the sun parlor, on the south side of the house, has four doors, one facing each of the points of the compass."

"Exactly right," agreed Goddard, "and the north door connects the sun parlor with the house."

"Opening into a hall—"

"A cross hall, yes," Goddard said. "Now, then," and Dobbins looked straight at Malcolm Finley, "when you came in thorough the east door, as you say you did, what did you see?"

"It was dusk, I could see nothing distinctly, but I made out the figure of Mr. Raynor, fallen to the floor, and I saw lying near him a pistol, which I at once picked up."

"Why?"

"I have told you I don't know. Merely a natural, unconscious action."

"Humph—your story is not very convincing. Then what else did you see?"

"Almost immediately the light was snapped on, and I saw Miss Turner, the nurse, in the house doorway."

"And Miss Turner's expression—her attitude? Did she—er—look surprised?"

"That I can't say. I merely saw that it was Miss Turner who stood there, and my glance flew at once to Mr. Raynor."

"You examined him?"

"No; I stood quite still. Mrs. Raynor, startled by the sound of the shot, appeared at the west door. She had come from the terrace, where we had tea—"

"Yes, she told all that. Reconstruct the scene, please."

"Mrs. Raynor appeared at the west door of the sun parlor, and stood there—as shocked, as petrified, as I was myself."

"Next?"

"Next, I think, Miss Raynor came—brushing past Miss Turner in the house doorway, and almost at the same instant Orville Kent appeared at the south door. He came in and went at once to his sister, and then we all began to make exclamations and ask questions. But there's the scene—as you call it."

"The next thing is," Dobbins proceeded, "to fix the time accurately. Do you know it, Mr. Finley?"

"I know that it was a little before seven—ten minutes or so before the hour. But I didn't look at my watch."

"Do you know the hour, Mrs. Raynor?"

"No—I've no closer idea than that it was a little before seven."

"Miss Raynor?"

"I think the shot occurred about fifteen minutes before the hour—and yet, no—I put on my boudoir light at five to seven. I think, or was it twenty to? I can't remember. Why does it matter so much?"

"Do you know Mr. Kent?"

"Not precisely; but when I left Miss Ray at the bridge she had just said it was seven o'clock, and that is nearly five minutes' walk away. When I came to the south door I saw Mr. Finley and the others gathered round in consternation—just as he described them."

"I have here before me, then, the first arrival on the scene, with the exception of Miss Turner. I think her presence is advisable."

Dobbins stepped to the door and summoned the nurse, who came at once.

"Please tell me of the tragedy as you know it, Miss Turner," the detective said.

"There's little to tell," said Miss Turner, who looked utterly worn and exhausted, papers coming to her eyes, perience with the doctor in the next room. "I heard a shot—"

"At what time?"

"At exactly five minutes before seven—"

"How do you know so definitely?"

"Because, as a nurse, I always know precisely what time it is. I glance at my wrist watch constantly—partly from habit, partly from the necessity in my profession of always knowing the time. Without looking, I can tell you now that it is exactly eight minutes after eleven."

"That's right," Dobbins said, with a satisfied glance at his own time-piece. "Where were you at five minutes before seven, Miss Turner?"

"In the pantry."

"And you, Miss Raynor?"

"In my boudoir—as I've told you."

"You, Mr. Finley?"

"In the east veranda."

"Mr. Kent?"

"Between the brook at the foot of the hill and this house."

"Mr. Goddard?"

"In my bedroom."

"Mrs. Raynor?"

Nan's face was very white and her voice faltered as she said, "On the west terrace."

"But," and Miss Turner spoke with a cold clearness, "I saw you, Mrs. Raynor, just going out of the sun parlor as I turned on the light."

"Just coming in—you mean," cried Orville Kent.

"No," Miss Turner declared, "just going out—and hurriedly. She came back, a moment later, and acted surprised at—at what she already knew."

"You're mistaken," said Finley, in a quiet way. "Your own surprise at the fearful scene the sudden light showed you dazed your eyes as well as your brain, and you couldn't tell just what you did see."

"Indeed I could!" Miss Turner spoke with decided asperity. "But I will admit I don't know which of you it was that killed him. Only—"

"Mr. Dobbins—it must have been one of the others, and that both know it."

"I think Miss Turner should be warned," put in Goddard's stern voice, "that she is unwise to accuse any one so definitely of what she cannot prove. As nearly as I can learn, the 'scene' which Mr. Dobbins so earnestly desired to have reconstructed includes some five or six individuals—any one of whom might have shot Mr. Raynor—beside the possibility of having shot himself."

"Therefore, Miss Turner, for your own good, let me advise you to say less and think more."

"After I have thought more—I can say a good deal more," was the significant response to this, and then Miss Turner was called back by the doctors.

"A valuable witness, that nurse," and Detective Dobbins nodded his head in satisfaction. "The way she knew the time, now; there's efficiency for you—there's reliability for you!"

We'll learn a lot from that woman when the time comes for her further revelation."

"But don't forget, Mr. Dobbins," Goddard warned him, "that Miss Turner, so far, is just as open to suspicion as any one else. Don't forget that, although Mr. Finley was at the east door, and Mrs. Raynor at the west one, yet they may have been attracted by the sound of a shot that was fired by some one who was at either the north or the south door."

"But Mr. Kent came in at the south door—"

"That was later, Mr. Dobbins. It is quite possible that an intruder from outside came in at the south door, fired the shot that killed Mr. Raynor, and disappeared again, before Mr. Kent reached the house at all."

"In that case you would have seen him running away, Mr. Kent?" the detective interjected.

"Not in the dusk," returned Orville Kent thoughtfully. "I am sure, as I shall outline the time of the shooting, he would have had time to get away before I came to the south door. It was too dark to see a man if he desired not to be seen—I mean by that, if he kept to the shadow of the shrubbery. A man walking straight away from the south door I should probably have seen, but not one who skulked furtively away—as, of course, I had no thought of looking for any such person."

Every one present except the detective seemed relieved at the suggestion of an intruder from the outside. Goddard followed it up.

THE NEWS' SOCIAL AND HOUSEHOLD PAGE

Hallow'en Spooks Will Revel in the Dim Light Of Candles Friday Night

THE hostess who is planning a Halloween party will find half the success of her party due to careful lighting arrangements. The lights—unless a bright one is necessary for some particular game—should be dim and flickering—Candles best achieve this effect. Faint wavering light will immediately suggest the occult and unusual to Halloween guests and will create a "spooky" atmosphere. If electric lights are used, the shades should be lined with green tissue paper.

Try greens, grays and an occasional gleam of orange for a color scheme. The grays will lend a vagueness and mystery that is most intriguing. A gray ball made of wire and cheesecloth suspended in such a way that he gently flutters at every opened door will be more effective than a black one. And gray witches, sailing on their broomsticks to wipe the cobwebs out of the sky are more mysterious than dead black witches.

To make "cobwebs," paste long ravelings of fine silk on a piece of cardboard and hang it in some doorway through which each guest must pass. The cardboard and threads must be inconspicuous and the threads of course, of different lengths that will suit the heights of the guests.

Green frogs and lizards and snakes, all creatures chummy with witches and sorceresses, might replace the usual bric-a-brac and drape themselves over backs of chairs or peep from dull sprays of leaves. The frogs and snakes may be made of cheesecloth or cambric and stuffed with rags, straw or sand—dependent on where the reptile is to disport himself. For instance, a snake twisted gracefully around the arm of a chair should be stuffed with rags, while a lizard investigating the edge of a table should gain his backbone from sand.

Place a shock of corn—or at least some stalks of corn—in one corner of the living room or hall. With the corn for her abode, a gipsy holds forth as fortune teller. She may be either a "palms" or a "medium"—gaining her knowledge from palms or communication with the spirit world. The decision rests with the hostess.

If apples are served during the evening let it be understood that each apple be "snapped" and named—the girl named for a man of her acquaintance and the man for a girl. Then the seeds must be counted to the accompaniment of this verse:

"One I love, two I love, three I love I say,
"Four I love with all my heart,
"Five I love, seven I love,
"Six I love, seven I love,
"Eight I love, seven I love,
"Nine I love, seven I love,
"Ten I love, seven I love,
"Eleven I love, seven I love,
"Twelve I love, seven I love."

And of course the name of the apple is the "he" or "she" of the verse. As for a Halloween supper, why not serve stuffed apple salad, pie with bread sandwiches, pumpkin pie with whipped cream and coffee? During the evening sweet cider might be served from a punch bowl.

Use a large cabbage to hold fruit as a centerpiece on the dining table. Cut the heart from the cabbage, leaving a strong shell. Fill it with grapes and apples and nuts. The effect is pleasing.

For the apple salad use twelve apples, one-half cup chopped raisins, one cup chopped nuts, four tablespoons orange marmalade, two Neuf-châtel cheeses, salad dressing.

Scoop out centers of apples, remove cores and chop apple. Combine raisins, nuts, marmalade, cheese and apples with salad dressing to make moist. Fill apples with mixture and serve on the feathered, with clematis if possible. If you can't get the clematis, any leaves or grasses will do.

In making the rye bread sandwiches combine ripe olives and sweet red peppers, using half as much pepper as olives. Season with salt and put between slices of buttered rye bread.

The recipe for the pumpkin pie is: One cup strained and sifted pumpkin, two-thirds cup brown sugar, two cups milk, one egg, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon ginger, one-half teaspoon cinnamon (optional).

Beat egg with sugar, salt and ginger. Add milk and pumpkin and mix well. Pour into pie dish lined with plain pastry and bake in a moderate oven until firm to the touch. This amount of custard will fill a medium-sized pie dish.

The secret of a good pumpkin pie lies in the stewing of the pumpkin. Long, slow cooking is imperative. Serve the pie with slightly sweetened whipped cream.

French Peasants Weave Gorgeous Clothes

News Staff Writer
BY M. THERESE BONNEY

PARIS, Oct. 27.—Of old, Silas Marner, silent, lone picturesque weaver, toiled alone in his wayside hut.

And now in these days of airplane travel and hurried commercial life, hundreds of real peasants of France weave, on hand looms, the beautiful cut velvets and other materials which the great French creators show in their salons.

These peasants have rebuilt their little one-room shanties in Pleadry and naught has changed save that finished pieces are brought to the warehouses in camouettes—no longer in wheelbarrows as in pre-war days.

To the soft, low hum of the loom, cradles are rocked. Hour after hour, the steady tread of the shuttle marks the passing of meter after meter of lustrous silk or rich toned kasha. These simple folk—in turn, husband, wife and old grandfather—perch one of the younger generation—spend their hour at the tread and weave the materials which sell in America for $20 or more.

The simple peasant of Pleadry is now the first link in the creations of Paris' greatest couturiers.

Missionary Will Speak Here Friday

Mrs. M. Armstrong, noted missionary of inter-denominational fame, will speak at the Congregational church Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. She will be the guest of the Congregational Missionary Society.

Mrs. Armstrong has been giving a series of lectures before Congregational churches throughout the country, telling of her work in foreign lands and appealing more directly to the women of the churches to assist in missionary work.

The Missionary Society's meeting is being called for Friday afternoon instead of Thursday because of the state convention of the Congregational church in Beaumont Thursday. Mrs. Armstrong will attend the convention in Beaumont Thursday and will come to Port Arthur Friday to address the Port Arthur women.

All women of the other churches in the city and the general public are cordially invited to hear Mrs. Armstrong. All planning to attend Friday's meeting are requested to notify Mrs. C. R. Raup, telephone 1238, or Mrs. W. J. Stock, telephone 1046 so that suitable arrangements may be made for all who attend. A special entertainment will follow Mrs. Armstrong's talk.

In the musical game of elements, Laurin Clawson won the first score and Eloise Laura the second. Delicious refreshments of cake and ice cream were served preceding the discussion of the club's finances. Disposition of last year's finances will be decided at the next meeting. All future meetings of the Aeolian club will be held the last Saturday of each month.

Here is the answer to yesterday's puzzle.

FASHIONS

The scarf of this season is wound closely about the throat and the streamers usually hang down in the back rather than in front.

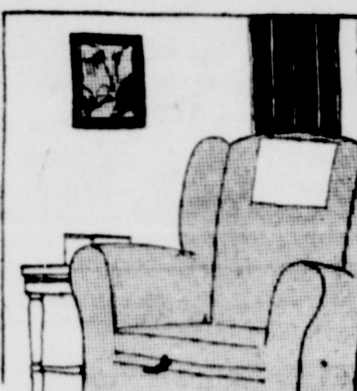

Crystal beads and bead fringes are used very successfully on pastel colored evening gowns.

The new striped and plaid velvets are most effective and are charming for semi-tailored gowns.

Some of the newest models from Paris show dresses with the natural waistline with ruffles and pleatums emphasizing it.

A very gorgeous ensemble costume is of brown velvet embroidered in gold and has a long coat lined with cloth of gold.

Keeping Chair Clean

A white cloth or napkin hung over the backrest of a chair or sofa prevents oil and dust from the hair from getting to the upholstery. It is easier to clean the cloth regularly, than the upholstery.

IS THIS YOUR BIRTHDAY?

MONDAY, OCTOBER 27.—A forgetful speaker, clever writer and fond of outdoors, you cannot stand restraint and you should immediately set out in business for yourself.

Your fierce temper, however, will work you harm unless you can learn to control it so that your strong personality will not be impaired.

Marry fairly early in life. It will help you to be more philosophical, which taken with your energy and determination to succeed, will make life's path a happy one.

These favors were presented the guests as souvenirs of the occasion. Covers were laid for eight.

Enjoying the pretty luncheon were Mrs. R. L. Rutan, Mrs. C. W. Litherland, Mrs. Mae McKinnery, Blanche McBride, Geneva Smith, Louise Erwin, Beatrice McKinney and Verdict Evans.

JUS TUS CLUB ENTERTAINED

Members of the Jus Tus club were graciously entertained Thursday evening by Miss Elizabeth Melton at her home in the Model Addition.

Following a pleasant evening of needlework and chatting, the hostess offered a lovely ice cream.

Those enjoying the charming affair were Miss Madeline Bondayson, Miss Linnie Hamilton, Miss Lula Hamilton, Miss Juanita Bean, Miss Audrey Byrd, Mrs. C. D. Williams and Miss Elizabeth Melton.

SMART EFFECT

Several of the new one-piece dresses show a double-breasted effect that is a variation from the inevitable front closing.

COPYRIGHT 1923 - NEA SERVICE, INC.

LETTER FROM LESLIE PRES-COTT TO RUTH BURKE, CONTINUED.

With Jack and Karl came dad's lawyer, and we all assembled in the library to hear the will read. At this time Alice made her first appearance among us since we had returned from the funeral. Poor child, she looked as though she had had a serious illness, and I felt so sorry for her that I went up and put my arms around her.

I haven't told you, Ruth, that we had quite a disturbance when Karl and Alice first arrived, and Jack told her that father had made him his executor and manager of the plant. Of course, after everything else, the quarrel got back to the pearls, and I gave them back to her and told Karl, before Jack and Alice, that I could not keep my promise to him; that I had never been happy with them, and I could never again wear them, knowing how Alice felt about them.

So you see I have gotten rid of at least one thing that might bring me discord and unhappiness, but I'm somewhat afraid that I've only passed them with all their dire import over to Alice and Karl; for Karl reproved Alice before us all, and it nearly broke her heart.

She was very subdued through the long legal announcements made by the lawyer as Jack had told us, except that it was couched in legal phrases. Dad gave to mother for life the income from his entire real estate; and a third of the income from his personal property and investments as long as she should live. The income from the other two-thirds is to be divided equally between Alice, myself, and little John, and John is made executor without bond.

Both of us started when this item was read, and Jack turned pale, for dad had not told him that part of his bequest. I thought at first Alice was going to remonstrate, but Karl put his hand gently over hers and she was silent.

At the death of mother, her share is to be divided equally between Alice and me.

It's a strange thing, Ruth dear, how destiny has worked out the case of little Jack. I am exceedingly glad that my father loved the boy well enough to insure his education and start in life, whatever any one else might do for him. Each day, now, as I know that another child is coming to me, my love grows greater for the boy I love. I love him for my husband's sake; I love him in spite of my husband's sin. I love him because I close him out of the world of little homes and motherless ones, and I think I can say that that is as great a love as a mother has even for a child that is hers because she bore it.

Oh, I know a great many people will think I am crazy to say this, but nevertheless each day I find that it is true in my case. I am eagerly waiting until my other child is born to see if nature will make any difference between the child of my body and the child of my choice.

There is much more I want to tell you, Ruth. There is much to be settled, of course, about the shop and other things. However, I will not come back with John immediately, as I hate to leave mother here alone. Alice at this time seems too much absorbed in her own unhappiness and sorrow to be of much comfort to her. However, I am going to have a talk with Jack before he returns, and then I will write you. Until then, remember dear, you are my best friend.

LESLIE.

Waistline Effects

This snappy French dress is of black velvet printed with Roman stripes in brilliant colors. It is decidedly new in line and in feeling and very attractive as you can see. The ruffle about the waistline is noticed on many smart gowns that have recently come over from Paris and seems to indicate that a new silhouette is on the way.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

No. 6—MISTER FUZZ WUZZ BECKONS

"Oh, dear, I'm so glad to see you twins again," he said.

"Oh, I know what we'll do!" cried Nancy as the Twins sailed along through the air on Daddy Gander's magic dust-pan. "We'll go and ask the Green Wizard who lives in the tree tops. He has a magic gazing ball. He ought to know where we can find the House-That-Jack-Built."

"That is a very good idea," said Daddy Gander. "But first of all will you look at my eyes and see if my glasses are on straight?"

"Yes, they are, Daddy," said Nancy. "Why?"

"Because I see something most unusual going on in that stumpy down there," said Daddy. "It looks like a queer sort of person, and as though he were waiting for us. Am I mistaken or not?"

Both Twins peeped over the edge of the stumpy and suddenly Nick cried out, "It's Mister Fuzz Wuzz, the pipe-cleaner man. Oh, we'll have to stop and say how do you do, won't we, Nancy?"

"Well," said Daddy Gander, "if you must you must, but all I've got to say is that we never get any place we start for. First we start for a mountain and wind up in an elevator in a gilly sort of place in the sky. Now we start for the Green Wizard's house to the tree tops and we have to stop and say polite things to a pipe-cleaner man. What's he called a pipe-cleaner man for anyway? And why Mister Fuzz Wuzz?"

"He is all fuzzy and has made out of long wire pipe cleaners," said Nick. "But he is far more important than he looks. He is the King of Doofunny Land!"

"Mr. oh my!" said Daddy Gander straightening his tie. "Is he as much as all that? We'd better stop then and shake his hand. Where is Doofunny Land and what it does mean?"

"Doofunny Land is down the stump," said Nancy. "And the people are queer. They are just odds and ends. Mostly odds."

Daddy Gander parked his magic dust-pan behind some bushes and they all went up to the stumpy where Mister Fuzz Wuzz was waiting.

"Oh, dear, I'm so glad to see you twins again," he said. "I certainly couldn't believe my old pipe-cleaner eyes when I saw you gallivanting around through the sky just now. The House-That-Jack-Built! Lost? You don't say so! Why don't you all come to Doofunny Land and ask all the Doofunny people about it?"

"That's a very good idea, indeed," said Daddy Gander. "They come from all parts of the earth so they ought to know something about it."

Down they went through the stumpy and there they were in Doofunny Land.

The first person they met was Miss Pithers, the ram lady.

"The House-That-Jack-Built! Lost?" she exclaimed. "You mean Jack-in-the-Box, I suppose."

"Oh, no," said Nancy. "Nothing like that."

"That's the only one I know of," said Miss Pithers, passing on.

"The House-That-Jack-Built!" exclaimed the Cut-Out Lady. "I never knew that the Jumping Jack was a carpenter."

"Oh, I know," said the Saw Horse. "Jack used me to lay his board on. So it is gone! If anyone in Doofunny Land has seen it, I'll let you know."

CHILD'S STORY OF THE HUMAN RACE

By Uncle RAY

The Gentle Poet of Stratford Part I—Williams Early Life

Three or four hundred years ago, men did not always spell their names in just the same way. It was common for a man to spell his "last name" in three or four ways. Sometimes a dozen or more spellings were used.

When Queen Elizabeth had just come to the throne, there lived in Village of Stratford a man whose last name was spelt in at least 14 ways. That man was John Shakespeare (or Shakespeare or Shakespeare, or almost any other way you might want to spell it). The trouble was that different persons had different ideas of how the surname should be spelt.

The man of whom I speak had a large family. His eldest son was called William. He became the most famous poet who has ever lived. William came to use only two or three spellings for his last name. "Shakespeare" was the most common.

William was born in 1564. No one knows on just what date. All we can be sure of is that he was baptized April 24 of that year. When he was six or seven years old, he appears to have entered school—and right here let me tell you a few things about the schools of those times. The pupils had to attend both summer and winter. During winter, the hours were "from dawn to dusk." In the summer, the pupils had to get to school at 6 in the morning and could not leave until 6 in the evening! There was an hour off for lunch, with recesses at 9 in the morning and 3 in the afternoon. William went to school until he was 15. Doubtless, he received a whipping now and then - though the master of his village school was not a cruel man. The chief things taught were writing, arithmetic and Latin. William's father was "chief alderman" of Stratford when his son

Citadels of Hell Will Fall Before Revival, Flowers Says

700 Persons Pack Auditorium to Hear First Evening Service in Methodist Meeting Begun Sunday

"There are a lot of men in Port Arthur who would like to have a big revival in this city, but a number of those men are traveling a road that leads straight to hell, and they're too weak to turn about and help put one over; I believe there's a burning hell, and that there are people in this town on the road to it; we need a great revival to save them, are you concerned in them?"

R. L. Flowers, Dallas evangelist who opened a two-weeks meeting at First M. E. church, south, Sunday, made these assertions from the pulpit of the church Sunday night in his sermon on "Revivals and How We Can Have One in Port Arthur." Seven hundred persons heard the sermon.

Rev. Flowers read as his text the entire first Psalm.

"Crumble Crime Waves"

"Revivals crumble crime waves," the evangelist declared, "and should we have one that would sweep this country, the crime wave of the land would fall before its compelling drive. Revivals just naturally breed law enforcement."

"Lots of people say 'we don't believe in revivals, we should be conservative.' Neither does the devil and all his imp of hell believe in revivals. But we need one, friends, if the Flowers evangelistic party didn't feel so, if we thought for one minute that there wasn't a need for one here in your city, we never would have answered the call of this church to come to Port Arthur."

Layman's Aid Urged

"We need your aid; we can't do a thing if you stand idly by while the rest of us try to put this thing over, for it's going to take the biggest kind of whole-hearted co-operation, and it's going to take prayer, and fight. We need business men in this campaign who will do just like that man in Old England not long ago, who, in the midst of a business conference, arose and told his fellow business magnates that the thing Britain needed most was another man with the voice of a Wesley!"

"The citadels of hell will fall when folks believe in God. We can't put this revival over if some of you people have a grudge against some others in this church; you'll have to get everything except God and the church and right thinking out of your system, or we can't have a revival here. Why, do you know it's a fact that a lot of people would have a sack over their heads when they got to the Golden Gates to keep them from spitting on some other folks? That's a fact! And if there are any in this church that feel that way about a lot of others, we won't have a revival until they get ready."

"God's Fighting Machine"

"The church of Jesus Christ is God's fighting machine in this world, and we need fight, we need songs like 'Onward Christian Soldiers,' we need strong men and women to put this campaign over. And we're going to have them, else we will not have a revival!"

The evangelist, in his remarks, outlined many of the things which he and his party plan to carry out in the revival, and called attention to the five morning meetings which will be held at the church during the present week. One of the features of the meeting, he said, will be a "sing-song" in which the children of Port Arthur will be presented under the direction of A. J. Flowers, special Sunday school worker, while the Sunday school drive itself, the evangelist outlined as a feature.

Tonight, at 7:30 o'clock, Rev. Flowers will deliver his sermon on "Port Arthur Special Liars and Hypocrites," announcing this as a "special theme to crooked business men."

MRS. FLOWERS SPEAKS TO FATHERS, MOTHERS

Mrs. R. L. Flowers of the Flowers evangelistic party, spoke yesterday afternoon at the Methodist church to a large crowd of married men and women on "The Present Day Problems of Fathers and Mothers."

Mrs. Flowers said in part that "often those who criticize most do least to help young people. The National Camp Fire organizers say there is nothing the matter with the American girl but her parents. In discussing the pitfalls for our boys and girls we hope to hold before you a danger signal such as we find on the highways which read 'As you value human lives drive carefully.'"

"I believe it is the business of the church to cry out against the evils hereto (Br. ss) Harrison; Second Officer West.

NOTE REGARDED AS A FORGERY

Punishment of Perpetrators Urged By Russia

MOSCOW, Oct. 27.—A note dispatched by the Russian government to the British government completely repudiates the latter's charges regarding the "Zinoviev letter," brands the letter as an "impudent forgery" and demands an apology and punishment of both private and official persons implicated in the forgery.

Russia proposes an impartial arbitration to confirm the fact that the alleged "Zinoviev letter" is a forgery and an attempt to disrupt Anglo-Russian amity.

The letter referred to is one signed by Zinoviev, president of the executive of the communist international addressed to British communists and urging revolt and sabotage. It was intercepted by secret service in England and was made the subject of a sharp note of protest handed to M. Christian Rakovsky, soviet envoy, last Friday.
